- TWO PERFECTLY MATCHED SHADES IN ONE PRODUCT
- MATTE, SATIN AND PEARLESCENT
- HIGHLY PIGMENTED TEXTURE
- CONTAINS VITAMIN E, SHEA BUTTER AND JOJOBA OIL

MAKEUP IDEAS:

- 1. Emphasize the eye contour and waterline with a brown shade, then draw a fancy line above the crease of the upper eyelid. Lightly blur the lines.
- 2. With a deep grape shade, draw classic lines to the middle of the eyelid and then create a reverse line in the inner corner of the eye with a lighter shade.
- 3. Create your usual clear black lines along the lash line and accentuate the lashline of the lower eyelid with a soft bronze haze. Use the same tone to trace an arc over the crease of the upper eyelid and blend it upwards.
- 4. Use a pencil as eye shadow: apply the lighter shade from the inner corner of the eye to the middle of the upper eyelid and the darker one to the outer corner of the eye, tracing a little upwards, to the tip of the eyebrow. Lightly accentuate the lower eyelid with the brown shade. Carefully blur all contours.

Aplysia, also known as a sea hare, is a mollusk boasting a wealth of research. Lacking a protective shell, this creature is able to survive in even the harshest conditions. Years of study and observation revealed this mollusk as a selective gourmet, whose tastes don't much change. Whether it's for breakfast, lunch, or a late dinner, Aplysia sticks to the same diet — the rare brown seaweed called Asparagopsis Armata.

Asparagopsis Armata is an algae known to help block cellular communication from old to young cells which contribute to the signs of aging. That's how aplysia has managed to survive — and created the inspiration to discover what possibilities existed in its chosen delicacy for skincare.

The French lab BiotechMarine developed a complex called ASPAR'AGE™, based on the features of brown algae.
